A Different Kind of COMPS Anna Ursin '25

Four seniors at the University of Wolkite show Amadou Toure '25 their senior project: a new clean water basin for the campus community. These students majored in engineering and dream of increasing access to resources in their native communities. Like many others in Ethiopia, they believe education is their way up and out of poverty.

- by class year: 50% juniors, 35% sophomores, and 15% sophomores
- by program length: 71% one-term programs, 20% semester programs, 9% break and less than one term programs, and <1% academic year-long programs
- 58% of participants were women and 42% were men

As in previous years, Carleton faculty took an active role in off-campus studies as directors of off-campus programs. Twenty-six members led Carleton off-campus study programs in 2022-23: Ken Abrams, Peter Balaam, Mihaela Czobor-Lupp, Cam Davidson, Anna Estes, Michael Flynn, Deborah Gross, Mike Hemesath, Dan Hernandez, Humberto Huergo, Eleanor Jensen, Iveta Jusova, Kiley Kost, Mike Kowalewski, Brendan LaRocque, David Liben-Nowell, Arthur McKeown, Victoria Morse, Tsegaye Nega, Diane Nemec Ignashev, Bill North, Eva Posfay, Constanza Ocampo-Raeder, Meera Sehgal, Victoria Thorstensson, and Sarah Titus.

This report covers students who earned Carleton credit on off-campus academic programs. It does not report students who earned Carleton independent study credits for academic work completed off campus. A number of students were also involved in volunteer projects, work abroad, domestic and international field camps in geology, biology, and archeology, and independent travel. The attached statistical tables, combined with the annual "Class of 2023 Participation in Off-Campus Studies" report, provide an in-depth view of off-campus studies at Carleton College.
