Career Building

Skill Building This Summer

First-year students often ask the Career Center, "Do I need to obtain an internship as a freshman?" We know that only one in five first-year students intern during their summer break. However, there are many more opportunities beyond an internship for students to foster their professional development. At the Career Center, we educate them on experiences they can explore and take on over the summer. For example, they can work a part-time job, research careers, volunteer, job shadow, network, and/or create an independent project. As a parent, you may feel that you need to support your student through their career development. Read more for resources to guide you through that process.
